SOAKING

In memory of Keegan Perry

Who leaps through the wildest grass? Who wades though the swirling waters?
Curious eyes stir the world into leaps and bounds.
And, it's the sounds--

the whispering breeze, that sings to the hooting owl or the rustle of the old gray mouse, the bobcats' yowl,
the red squirrel's caterwaul.

and the gentle crawl
of the nymph-gnat crossing the surfaces of cherished creeks and rivers-- minutes, hours, months, when the trees themselves in their multicolored leaves and the bees, the bees inflecting their busy wisdom in that light jittery dance of flowers, where you dig with fingers and Bullie digs with paws, way down into the roots, among the whirly-bugs, where it begins where the solitary earthworm pulls its tunnels, deep deeper still, until you reach the inner core, where wings are grown, broad feathers like the falcon, where everything comes together in a heartbeat, in the blink of a singular eye.

Come on boys, soar, dream, fly.
